The Visual Elements in Works of Art : Line - Shape - Tone - Colour - Pattern - Texture - Form

The Visual Elements of line, shape, tone, color, pattern, texture and form are the building blocks of composition in art. When we analyse any drawing, painting, sculpture or design, we examine these component parts to see how they combine to create the overall effect of the artwork.

The Visual Elements have a relationship to one another:

- Most images begin their life as line drawings.
- Lines cross over one another to form shapes.
- Shapes can be filled with tone and color, or repeated to create pattern.
- A shape may be rendered with a rough surface to create a texture.
- A shape may be projected into three dimensions to create form.

In order to better understand the use and effect of these elements, take some time and browse the following website for more details and examples.
